Thirty-seven patients with histologically proved renal cell carcinoma (RCC) were evaluated prospectively by MR imaging. All tumors were judged to be localized, confined to the renal capsule, and had the appearance of "punctate" contrast enhancement. In 31 tumors, the enhancement was "radial" (i.e., pattern characteristic of benign renal tumors). In 16 patients, however, the radially enhancing renal tumors also showed a "discrete cap" of arterial enhancement in the intrarenal distribution of the mass that was not present in the tumors of other patients. The "discrete cap" appeared to be indicative of malignancy; tumors with these findings were found to be malignant at surgery in 88% of the patients.
