In this day and age, two corporations that are synonymous with garbage are Microsoft and Dell. Microsoft makes way more money, but Dell makes a ton of money as well. Dell is a company that is primarily designed to make money. Dell needs money because it's shareholders want to see a good profit. They want to be able to write a check and pay for their children's colleges. The problem with Dell is that it's a terrible company to work for. Most of the people at Dell are not making much money, which is why they have to lower prices to do business. However, the profit that they make is very low. It's at least a 10% profit margin. That's worse than you might think because most of their profits are going to Microsoft instead of Dell. They are about half a billion dollars short each year. They need that money for stock buybacks or dividends, and the latter is very important. Dell can't have bad reviews and bad reviews hurt shareholder value. So, they either buy back stock or pay out dividends. Dell hires a lot of people in the US, but most of them are not paid very well. The only reason that people go to Dell is to make their day more interesting. That's the real reason that Dell makes so much money. Their engineers are not very skilled. They need to do something every day. They need something to do. They're given a chance to make money, but that doesn't matter to them. If they're not paid well, they are not going to be happy with their jobs. If they're not happy
