Adjustment layers are like a virtual layer with a specific opacity, similar to a layer in Photoshop. If you reduce the opacity, the effect becomes false transparency on the layer. If the layer hides the underlying layer behind it, the layer becomes semitransparent. - Hue/Saturation: An adjustment layer that can be used to adjust the color, hue (color wheel) and saturation (lacking color) in an image. This particular layer helps control important characteristics like light and dark in your image. - Levels: An adjustment layer that can be used to adjust the light and dark areas (midtones) of an image. This layer can be very useful for getting accurate and consistent results during color adjustments. - Whirls/Rings: An adjustment layer that can be used to add a swirling or ring-like color effect to certain parts of your image. It is a very useful tool for creating smoke, efffects, or creating grunge. - Dodge and Burn: Dodge and Burn are often used creatively, but can also be used in moderation. These adjustment layers can be used to bring out fine details and bring out dark areas or dark sections of your image. They are often used to add a special effect to your image.
