Williams was quoted in an article in the Washington Post as saying that “transgender” people were often “not acting like the gender they identify with,” while arguing that “there’s no logical reason why they would be in the population.” As the same article pointed out, this was just one out of many incendiary remarks by high-level officials in the current administration on issues of race, LGBTQ rights, and civil rights generally. The administration has gone to great lengths to isolate and punish those who dare to challenge its policies, through the revocation of rights for people within the prison system, and the creation of separate federal facilities where transgender people are separated from other prisoners and are not allowed to use the bathroom facilities for the gender they identify with. The latest step in the Trump administration’s aggressive efforts to separate transgender people and their ability to use
